Long-term data: selecting insights to manage expectations and make the right choices

Dear GCA Academy members,

Two well-known professors will share with us the importance of long-term clinical studies for breast implants, and what to expect after 10 and 15 years after implantation regarding safety and performance.

They will discuss around the main complications that can be expected and also about patient satisfaction after implantation.

These type of clinical studies can give insights on the differences of the current implants on the market and they can provide an objective tool for surgeons when choosing the implant and when managing patient journey.
